8	I learned English at a language school, EF, in London for over three month when I was a college senior. However, I was not able to speak English as well as I can now, even when I was in London. It was after I started to hang out with co-working ALTs that I began to feel comfortable speaking English.	2/2/2015 12:07 PM
9	No. But I wish I could have done.	1/26/2015 2:44 PM
10	When I was 23 years old, I went to the United States for a month. I took the intensive course of English in Iowa State University for two weeks and went on a bus tour through the North American Continent for two weeks. In 1990 I was designated for a teacher of Japanese language working in the Correspondence School in New Zealand. I worked in an office in Wellington for one year, checking students papers, writing a revised course of Japanese Language in cooperation with Kiwi stuffs there. Also I wrote a script for Japanese lesson for the NZ radio, of course in English and my voice was recorded and on air. How exciting days! My wife ,my 5-year-old son ,a baby daughter and I went on a car trip through the South Island for two weeks. Those were my happy days.	1/24/2015 9:45 AM
